

FORWARD MOVE BEGAN FRIDAY

Oyama Begins To Press Upon Linevitch Despite The Talk Of Protocol.

RUSSIAN CAVALRY PUT TO FLIGHT

Cossacks Panic Stricken By The Charge Of The Japs
Flee, Leaving All They Possess In The Hands Of The Victors.

Tokio, June 19.—Field Marshal Oyama has begun a general advance. He routed 5,000 cavalry, part of Gen. Mischonko's command, and occupied Liaoyangpung, sixty miles southwest of Gunshu pass, which is the headquarters of Gen. Linevitch, commander in chief of the Russian army.

The Japanese advance indicates that the long expected turning movement to the west, which has been in preparation for three months, and which is intended to envelop the czar's entire army, has begun.

The Russians were panic stricken on the retreat and burned provisions and stores. Other minor engagements resulted favorably to the Japanese.

Until June 11 the Japanese lines to the west had been practically stationary for three months about twenty miles north of Tieling, where pursuit of the Russians halted after the battle of Mukden. During this interval the engagements were thirty miles apart. Only skirmishes occurred until June 11, when the Japanese made a rush, advancing twenty miles. Field Marshal Oyama announces that the second rush was made on June 10, the Japanese occupying the 10 mile line.

The whole force followed the railway in its general direction between Choyang range on the east and the swamps of the Herusu river on the west. Four main roads passing through the territory run parallel with the railway. Along these roads the Japanese columns, three to each road, advanced June 15.

The hardest fighting was on the extreme left, where Gen. Mischonko, with 5,000 cavalry and twenty guns, was routed, the Russians retreating in great confusion.

The Japanese casualties along the entire front, which was sixty miles wide, were thirty killed, including a number of officers, and 185 wounded. The Russians burned villages and incinerated their dead. Consequently computation of losses is difficult. They are probably very heavy. Eighty dead Russians were found on the field in front of the central column of the Japanese left wing.

The Japanese now hold the Kuyut.

BIG STORMS SWEEP OVER THE COUNTRY

Ice House at Oconomowoc Struck by Lightning—Iowa Flooded
Again.

Official Report of Advance.

The following report has been received from the Manchurian armies: "In the Welyuanpaomen district at 9 o'clock on the morning of June 16 300 of the enemy's cavalry advanced against Kuyushu, but were repulsed. "In the Chamotu district our advanced force, after driving out the enemy stationed at Sumiencheng, occupied that village.

"In the Tasiamotun district our detachment, after dislodging the enemy's cavalry at Souhatzu, eight miles west of Sumiencheng, occupied that village.

"In the Kangpin district at 1 o'clock on the morning of June 16 our center column after routing the enemy's cavalry outposts at Tienchawopeng, sixteen miles northeast of Kangping, and continuing a vigorous pursuit attacked the enemy's position at the southern end of Liaoyangpung and to the eastward between 4 and 8:30 o'clock, and at 9 o'clock we occupied Liaoyangpung.

Russian Cavalry Retreats.

"Our right column, after driving the enemy's cavalry before it, occupied Luchuanpou, nine miles east of Liaoyangpung. This column again shelled the enemy's cavalry, retreating to the northward, inflicting heavy injury. The enemy finally was thrown into great confusion.

"The left column poured a fierce fire upon a thousand of the enemy's cavalry retreating to the northward of Liaoyangpung and inflicted heavy damage.

"According to prisoners, 5,000 cavalry, with twenty guns, forming part of Lieut. Gen. Mischonko's army, occupied Liaoyangpung. The main force retreated northward and parts of it to the northward and northwestward in disorder. There are evidences that the enemy was panic-stricken and utterly confused. Abandoned provisions and clothing indicate the great difficulty the enemy had in carrying off supplies. In retreating the enemy fired a house south of Liaoyangpung, and it is presumed that he intended to incinerate his dead."

WILL RUSSIAN CZAR ISSUE THE UKASE?

Question Whether Bureaucrats Have Succeeded in Changing Nicholas' Mind This Time.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

St. Petersburg, June 19.—It has been generally reported that the Emperor will issue tomorrow a manifesto or a ukase proclaiming a parliament to be convoked next September. Experience has taught the Russians, however, that Nicholas II. is capable of having his mind changed quite easily by his bureaucratic relatives and fear is expressed in some quarters that the proclamation will not be forthcoming. Several prominent statesmen like De Witte and others boldly say that the Emperor must soon give the people some assurance of relief, else Russia will go lower and lower. The scheme is for a bicameral legislative body, consisting of a lower house, called the Gosudarstvennaya Duma, "Imperial Duma," and an upper house, Gosudarstvennaya Sovet, or the present council of the empire, with power to formulate legislation, discuss the budget, interpellate ministers, etc., but reserving in the Emperor's own hands the final authority. The elections are expected to take place during the summer. Although the scheme clings with desperation to the essence of autocracy, it really marks the beginning of the end, the Russian people believe. The die once cast, there can be no retreat and the quasi-parliamentary regime which will be inaugurated will be only a transitory bridge over which absolutism must cross to constitutionalism.

JEFFERSON COUNTY, N. Y., CENTENNIAL

MANY INJURED IN EXPLOSION

New York Subway The Scene Of A Frightful Accident Sunday Afternoon.

FIFTY TO ONE HUNDRED ARE HURT

Assistant Engineer And Executive Clerk Are Placed Under Arrest, The Former Being A Patient
At A Hospital.

New York, June 19.—Two explosions of terrific force in quick succession, in boilers in the subway construction power house at One Hundred and Sixty-first street and the Hudson river, put scores of lives in jeopardy Sunday afternoon.

At least two persons were probably fatally injured, a dozen others sustained serious injuries and so many more were cut, shocked and otherwise hurt that the police put the total of casualties at fifty to one hundred. The explosion took place in the center of a zone of activities in which Sunday holiday crowds were participating. At the instant that the fearful forces retained by the boilers were released and scattered in a furious storm of hurtling iron and debris, groups of children with their parents, and parties of young folk were on the grassy slopes a stone's throw distant.

Within forty yards of the power house are the West End Yacht club building and the Hudson beach bathing pavilion. Wives and guests of club members on the club house porch were assailed by a hail of missiles. More than a hundred persons were in the bathing pavilion. The blast hurled scores of them in the water. Many yachts, sailing near shore, careened perilously from the concussion. A yard of twisted iron, screaming in its might like chain shot, tore the awning from above the heads of a merry party aboard a naphtha launch and fell hissing into the water beyond them. A few feet lower and the missile must have brought death to the party.

Witnesses declare that the escape of many persons from death passes comprehension. The sky over a considerable area in the vicinity of the explosion was literally darkened for a time, adding to the terrors of the scene.

Two Are Under Arrest.

The entire emergency staff of the J. Hood Wright hospital hurried to the scene, and with twenty-five policemen directed the work of rescue. Daniel Barry, assistant engineer, and John Keaveny, an executive clerk employed by the McDonald Construction company, were placed under arrest, the former in the hospital.

The power-house contained four boilers, which supplied power for air compressors.

Boiler No. 1, installed in the power-house five years ago, and said to have been a second-hand boiler at that time, was rent in pieces like the bursting of a bomb.

By the wrecking of the plant the work of completing the boring for the tunnel in the Fort George section as far south as 148th street will be seriously hampered.

MORE TESTIMONY ON THE GREAT GRAFTERS

Chicago Grand Jury is Learning
More Facts as to Management of Strikes.

[SPECIAL BY SCRIPPS-M'RAE.]

Chicago, June 19.—Robert J. Thorne of Montgomery, Ward & Co., was a witness before the grand jury today in the labor graft inquiry. Members of other large business concerns will be called upon to testify. It is reported additional evidence tending to give corroboration to the charge that conspiracy existed between the employers and strike-leaders was today given the jury by State's Attorney Healy and his assistants.

STATE NOTES

Three bids for building a trunnion bascule bridge across Root river at Racine were received by the board of public works. They are: Milwaukee Bridge company, $104,000; Edward Gillen Dock, Dredge and Construction company, $103,420; Jackson Corbett, Chicago, $123,016.

Under the auctioneer's hammer the costly La Crosse residence of the late Mons. Anderson, the "merchant prince," is to be sold and the last vestige of one of the largest private fortunes of the early Mississippi river trade will be wiped out. The residence was built forty years ago, costing about $50,000. It probably will be bid in for the Y. W. C. A.

Officers of the Wisconsin synod of Welsh Presbyterian churches, in session at Racine, were elected as follows: Moderator, the Rev. J. C. Jones, Chicago; stated clerk for two years, the Rev. J. R. Jones, Columbus; treasurer of missions, E. J. Morgan, Milwaukee. The synod will meet at Oshkosh next year.

For Motor Cars.

"Are there any new improvements in the motor line since I was here?" inquired an enthusiast, as he entered the store of the dealer in motor cars. "Yes," said the proprietor, "one just came in this morning. It is a folding horse, to be carried under the seat and used in case of accident."

WEATHER PREDICTIONS.

The Rev. Irl Hicks, of St. Louis, author of "Word and Work," is recognized today as the best authority in the country on weather forecasts.

He is an intelligent worker, and his deductions are purely scientific. The movement of planets and their relation to each other are carefully considered, and his predictions are so reliable that any unprejudiced mind is forced to admit that there is no guess work about it.

There is a class of people in the world who don't want to know anything about the future. They argue that "sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof," and if a storm or trouble is brewing, it will be time to seek shelter when the break comes.

This doctrine may be all right for people who have nothing at stake, and while it is wise not to borrow trouble, it is also the part of wisdom to be prepared for it. The man would be called a fool who would start out in a sail boat to cross Lake Michigan, when danger signals were displayed from every weather tower.

The man who cultivates the soil exhibits intelligence in his work in proportion to his observations of weather and climatic conditions, and he is no longer considered foolish when a cyclone cellar is provided for emergencies.

Mr. Hicks is constantly in receipt of letters from farmers in all parts of the country, expressing appreciation for his reliable forecasts. He is also the subject of more or less ridicule, if a shower falls to materialize in a given locality at a stated hour.

An editor in the northern part of the state, wrote a paragraph at three o'clock in the afternoon, a few days ago, to the effect that the sun was shining, and Hicks's tornado was delayed on account of the weather. Three hours later he was hunting for a hole in the ground to get away from the storm. A little attention given to his barometer would have saved embarrassment.

It is generally known that the government supports at some expense, a department known as the weather bureau. The fact is also generally recognized that this department knows more about the weather of yesterday than it does about the weather of tomorrow.

Just why the weather bureau should be antagonistic to the Rev. Irl Hicks is not easily determined, but the fact remains that such antagonism exists, and occasionally breaks out in violent form.

In a recent bulletin known as number 322, the author devotes time and energy to ridiculing the long range weather forecaster who is now operating in St. Louis, meaning, of course, the Rev. Hicks.

The animus inspiring this bulletin is so apparent that it will reflect to the benefit of Mr. Hicks, and while that gentleman is a little "warm under the collar," he has no occasion to feel aggrieved. The weather bureau will continue to issue waste basket material while the Hicks publications will find a place with the scientific bible in many homes where scientific work is appreciated.

CIVIL SERVICE REFORM.

President Roosevelt is a staunch advocate of civil service reform, but he is now confronted with a proposition which should open his eyes to some of the weaknesses of the system.

The capitol at Washington is a great bee hive of government employees, many of whom have grown gray in the service. The postoffice scandal of a year ago and the government printing office, now under investigation, disclosed the fact that civil service protected employees, who honest service.

It occurred to the President that possibly some other departments might need investigating and so he recently appointed a commission of five men with full authority to clean house.

The work is still in its infancy, but enough rottenness has been discovered to warrant a thorough investigation. It has been found that the public crib is an enticing feed box, for every man who can get near enough to occupy a stool at the lunch counter.

Government contracts for supplies and improvements have been awarded with a recklessness which no private corporation would tolerate, and the heads of some departments are so much worried that frequent references to their civil service diplomas are necessary to discover where they are at.

The good work should go on until the whole country is covered. If a little attention is given to the presidential postoffice it will be discovered that they are honeycombed with civil service prated employees, who recognize the government as the employer, to whom alone they are accountable.

They will discover also that the postmaster has no employees and his authority over the people supposed to be under him, is less than the section boss in the railway service.

Civil service is all right in theory, but in practice it is a dismal failure, when applied to positions which do not require long continued service to become expert.

When the late Henry C. Payne entered the cabinet as postmaster general, he wanted as his right-hand man and advisor, his private secretary, but the place was filled by a civil service Cleveland democrat, and Mr. Payne was not permitted to select his own helpers.

What the people want is intelligent loyal service, with no strings attached. The men held responsible for work should have authority to select the workers, the same as they have in the business and industrial world.

The Singer Sewing Machine Co. has just issued a little book giving the names and addresses of 4,552 agencies and representing every country in the world. The Singer company has long been noted for enterprise and reliability. It represents today one of the great industries of the country.

The senate is supposed to do its share when it confirms the rate commission. No one expected that the members would be consulted. The governor is not given to consultation. His is to command, the senate to obey. That's a simple proposition to which no reasonable man will object.

"The menace of the machine," is the topic which the governor will discuss at the Rockford Chautauqua. Wisconsin has the best vehicle of this kind in the country and the governor has no rival as a chauffeur.

With two politicians and a university professor for a rate commission, what sort of service can the people and railroads expect, but the governor made the appointment and he never makes any mistakes.

Mr. Grottofort took a vacation from the state board of control long enough to run for congress, and it now looks as though the balance of the board will retire to make place for the new woman.

There are 26 national banks in this country with deposits ranging from $25,000,000 to $255,000,000 each. That means a good deal of money, but the savings banks have a still larger volume.

If Haughton should not be confirmed as a member of the rate commission, the governor might appoint himself and then resign. This is only a suggestion.

The rate commission should have been composed of three level headed business men who represented more than a salary or a patron of the public crib.

PRESS COMMENT.

Superior Telegram: It seems as if somebody could make a fortune by putting a fur-lined straw hat on the market.

Milwaukee News: It is reported at Madison that the governor does not intend to quit until fall. Mr. Davidson may pay the rent.

Milwaukee Sentinel: Fortunately the senate is not in session to put a spoke in the wheel of President Roosevelt's peace movement.

Washington Star: King Alfonso is said to have kept perfectly cool when the bomb was thrown at him. A well-trained monarch must be able to drive up to explosives without shying.

Chicago Record-Herald: An Indiana preacher has been asked to resign his pulpit because he uses an automobile. The dispatches do not say whether he inherited his money or married it.

Madison Democrat: A Philadelphia belle kissed a boy who stopped her horse from running away. But she has probably kissed her poodle dog often, so that it came easy.

Boston Journal: Mrs. Brod Duke declares that she will break the tobacco trust in two years. A great many citizens would doubtless be willing to furnish her funds if she can do the job.

Chicago Inter Ocean: It would be just as permissible to speak of the Grand Duke Alexis, perhaps in the past tense, as it was some years ago to refer to the deposed Sultan Asiz as the Sultan Asawz.

Marquette Eagle Star: If every minor court of the United States would only uphold the majesty of the law like the federal authorities, there would be more general respect for law and fewer violations of it than now exist.

Madison Democrat: Still, those nifty girls who roll their sleeves "washerwoman style" might have their silliness overlooked were it conceivable that they ever lifted a dainty hand to a tolling mother.

Beloit Free Press: The Janesville common council did not repeal the ordinance prohibiting theatrical entertainments Sunday nights, and thereby won the respect of a large portion of Janesville and every other city of similar or greater size.

Oshkosh Northwestern: Many a young man has imagined a little that he was merely engaged in a little game of flirtation only to wake up and find that he has entered into a legal contract to let a female business manager have charge of his personal affairs.

St. Louis Globe Democrat: The searchlights defeated the navy seeking to effect the capture of Fort Henry and other fortifications along the Chesapeake. The searchlight has been a great work in this country lately in games of Hyde and seek.

Beloit Free Press: Janesville expects the census takers who begin their work next week Tuesday to show up totals that will "greatly exceed 14,000. If they do not, Janesville is prepared to believe that the takers did not know their business, or, knowing it, criminally failed to "make good."

El Paso (Texas) Herald: La Follette will probably find quite a difference when he exchanges Wisconsin for a mere seat in the senate; particularly when he comes into controversy with the other senator, Spooner, out for blood, and not for votes. Spooner is quite the liveliest atom in the senatorial molecule.

Eau Claire Telegram: The mayor of Oconto was offered a "rake-off" of $40 on a purchase of fire hose, took it and then turned it into the city treasury. And the public are keeping up a powerful thinking about rakeoffs which may have passed to officials not like the mayor of Oconto and of which nothing has been made public.

Racine Journal: Pickling strawberries is justly denounced in a strong editorial paragraph in an exchange. There are some things that will move the editorial heart strangely and this was one of them. Pickle strawberries, why the mere idea! Isn't there enough now of all sorts of pickled things to permit of the toothsome strawberry being left alone?

Fond du Lac Commonwealth: Milwaukee is making a business of going after conventions these days. There is nothing too small and there are none to large to escape the batteries directed from that city. Printed matter by the ton and talk by the yard is being used and with good results. All of which illustrates that it pays to go after a thing if it is really worth it.

Boston Transcript: The four most successful plays of the past season were by American authors, and of these the two most successful dealt with American life and conditions. Although many managers still remain unconvinced, it looks very much as if the playgoers are quite agreed that there's no place like home, sweet home.

Exchange: William H. Crane, the actor, says he first learned what true love is by accidentally overhearing a brief conversation between a young man and a very pretty girl. "And you're sure you love me?" said she. "Love you?" echoed the young fellow. "Why darling, while I was bidding your good-bye on the porch last night your dog bit a large piece out of the tail of my leg and I never noticed it till I got home."

Des Moines Register: Each year there are granted in the United States as many divorces as altogether in France, Germany, Sweden, Belgium, Greece, Austria, Norway and Great Britain. The showing gives this nation a decidedly unsavory reputation. It calls renewed attention to the extent of the divorce evil. Americans are pleased to speak of the morality prevailing among the people of Europe, yet in the matter of divorce, which has been stigmatized as nothing more than progressive polygamy, America is the equal of the greater part of Europe. The marriage tie may be growing to be disregarded, but it is dispensed to be disregarded, in America.

Chicago Chronicle: Although the asperities arising from the late unpleasantness have largely disappeared, it was hardly to have been expected that the Confederate Veterans' association at Louisville would welcome with enthusiasm the discovery that a federal colonel was leaving a vacancy. Such a development looks like an excess of reconciliation sentiment, and it is small wonder that the federal colonel was invited to leave a vacancy. It would be interesting to know how he got into the confederate camp and what he was doing there anyhow.

Green Bay Gazette: With the signature of Gov. La Follette to the new rate bill presented to him by the legislature the last of the issues between him and the stalwarts has been practically eliminated. Both factions were agreed as to the need of a rate bill, the difference of opinion resting solely in some of the provisions embodied in the measure. In the governor's hand the way to a great extent has had the application of the measure to practical work will test its efficiency. The other measures enacted by this and the preceding legislature clears the way so that the governor can accept the senatorial conferred upon him by the legislature without the charge of inconsistency being made against him. It is safe to say that the members of the republican party in the state of Wisconsin regardless of faction, would gladly welcome an end to the contest which has prevailed during the past few years. The leaders now have it in their power to bridge the chasm of contention without the sacrifice of any principle which has been contended for in the past and it is their duty to do it so far as lies in their power.

PREFER NIGHT TRAVEL.
Make Their Own Inclination Hogs
Left Their Journeys During the Cool of the Night.

The Arizona Republican says the hogs were corn fed and exceptionally fat. They were started for town during the day, but by the time they reached a point a little less than a mile from home many of them were unable to continue the journey, and the march was stopped. During the cool of the evening they were taken back home.

A hog is a foolish thing, and in going a few miles many frequently take unnecessary steps, thus making the distance much longer than it really is. This partly accounts for their becoming so hot such a short way from their starting point. They were allowed to spend the night at home, but the next night the trail was taken up again.

This time after dark or rather after sundown, for it was almost as light as day, from the moon. The hogs seemed to be delighted with the new order of things, and the way they capered to town was a caution. It was almost all the drivers could do to keep up with them. They gave no trouble whatever and reached the shipping yards in fine shape.

Keeler Tells How To Bat

Leading Scientific Stick Swinger Says "a Step Forward and a Good Eye" Are Principal Factors In Hitting. "Stand Close to Plate."

Willie Keeler is the premier scientific batsman of the major leagues. He believes that with two essentials—"a good eye" and a step forward—any ball player, amateur or professional, can become an expert batsman. He eliminates luck as a factor in the long run. Keeler recently illustrated for the writer of this article the means whereby any one with a KEELER STEPPING FORWARD TO MEET BALL. baseball idea can develop himself into a good hitter. He stepped up to the plate, gripped his short bat well up on the handle and stepped forward.

"This forward step," he said, "is the secret of scientific hitting. The batter should stand right up to the plate, with his feet near together. His position should be easy, so that he can bring his arms, legs and body instantly into play.

"Then he is ready to meet the ball. The pitcher throws, and the ball comes sailing toward the plate. Instead of waiting for the ball to reach him the proper batter steps forward just one short step and meets the sphere. This step should not be long, as that is liable to throw the body out of poise and make a correct swing impossible. One short step and then a short, sharp swing squarely at the ball.

"Right here is where the eye—the batting eye—figures. A batting eye—the one that enables the batter to see the ball all the way from the pitcher's

KEELER'S BATTING POSITION. [Notice how far apart Keeler's arms are as he grasps bat to bat.]

er's hand to the plate—is an essential, and comes only with plenty of practice. The beginner should remember the step forward and then keep on practicing. The rest is bound to come. "A point that should be remembered particularly is to stand close to the plate. This takes a bit of nerve until the batter becomes accustomed to facing speedy balls."

Great Atlantic.

Story of Winner of Kaiser's Yachting Trophy, Her Owner and Designer.

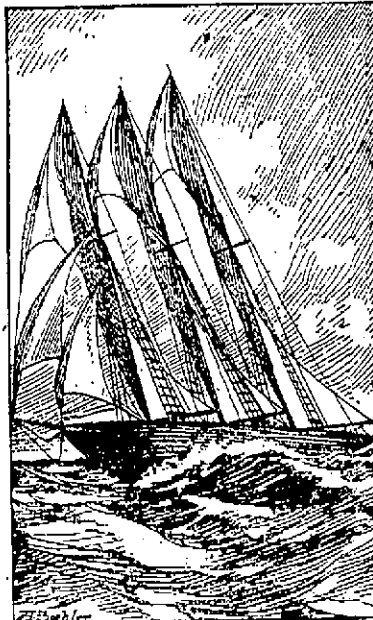

The victory of the three-masted schooner Atlantic in the recent international race for the Kaiser's cup has given still greater glory and prestige to American yachtsmen, yacht builders and yacht designers. The Atlantic's record-breaking run, with Captain Charlie Barr at the wheel, was even more notable than the winning of the German ruler's $5,000 trophy. In addition to establishing a new record—341 miles—for a day's run, she broke the world's record for five days' sailing.

Wilson Marshall, the owner of the victorious yacht, is young in years, but a veteran of the sport. He has been a member of the New York Yacht club since 1880 and in this time has owned many vessels, the one preceding his present craft also bearing the name Atlantic. Born in New York not more than thirty-four or thirty-five years ago, he has from youth been fascinated with the pleasures and possibilities of yachting. As he grew older the size of his boats increased until he was induced through the gradual development of his love of the sport to order the schooner that has given all connected with it worldwide fame. Mr. Marshall lives on Long Island sound in the summer time at his palatial house, Marina, near Bridgeport, Conn., and off it in deep water his ocean racer and cruiser was anchored for days just before the start of the international contest.

The elder Marshalls will be recalled by New York's oldest citizens, as they were identified with its stages and stage routes, giving to the people the transportation from point to point in Gotham now so much improved by the trolley and subway lines.

The Atlantic was completed in the last days of 1900 and in the early winter made her maiden cruise to the West Indies and the Caribbean sea. She was gone for months, and upon her return to New York her interior decorations were completed. She appeared on the cruise of the New York Yacht club squadron last summer, and her performance was watched with the keenest interest. She won several runs and the cups called for and also added to her silver collection of the prizes offered by the flag officers.

Mr. Marshall challenged for the Brenton's Reef and Cape May cups (offered by the N. Y. Y. C.) and won them both. In the former, 298 miles, the Atlantic required 40 hours 30 minutes and 25 seconds, beating the schooners Resolute and the Endymion as named. In the latter, 212 miles, she took 38 hours 33 minutes 16 seconds, defeating the Endymion, while the other starter, the Vergenore, gave it up after turning the Cape May mark.

The Atlantic has the complete propelling machinery of a steam yacht and, her designer says, has made eleven knots an hour under steam. The propelling machinery consists of a triple expansion engine of about 300 horsepower, two boilers and a feathering screw, which fills completely her aperture when feathered for sailing. The sails are ordinarily raised with electricity and has one large dymmo and engine and capacitors storage batteries. She has also an acetylene gas plant, a two-ton refrigerating machine and tiled ice boxes, with a capacity of 800 cubic feet. There are three skylights, three companion hatches and a large skylight over the engine and boiler room.

Steering is done from the raised quarter deck aft. The stack is telescopic. The accommodations consist of a large saloon, five staterooms, chart and gun room and three bathrooms, which are porcelain lined. The deck house is used as an observation room and is connected with stairs to a spacious lobby below.

William Gardner, the Atlantic's designer, has long been known to yachtsmen and has their confidence. He is still on the bright side of life in the matter of years and has been a member of the New York Yacht club since 1890. Like the Atlantic's owner, he was born in New York state, his birthplace being Oswego. He was graduated from Cornell, whose students nowadays are conquering the world by their athletic prowess, and following his graduation he passed five years in Great Britain in the practical and theoretical study of naval architecture. Mr. Gardner began the business of designing yachts in 1899.

M'Graw And His Troubles

Manager of New York Nationals Finds Life Is Not One Long Sweet Dream -- Unusual Phases of His Complacations.

John ("Mugsy") McGraw is having his share of troubles these days. The job of managing the New York National league champions is supposed to be sufficient to keep an ordinary man very busy, but John Mugsy has been picking up a few added complications on the side.

In Philadelphia recently McGraw and several of his players were mobbed by irate Quakers who considered the Phillies ill treated. On returning to New York McGraw bucked up against the Pittsburg Pirates, and the story of his clash with President Dreyfuss is well known throughout the country. The subsequent action of President Pulliam of the National league in suspending McGraw and fining him $100 because of the Dreyfuss affair aroused McGraw's ire to such an extent that in Boston he asked for an injunction to prevent Pulliam's order from continuing in effect. It seemed the National league directors in clearing McGraw of blame in the Dreyfuss matter did not apply sufficient salve to the manager's wounds.

JOHN ("MUGSY") MCGRAW.

Luckily for McGraw, he has a big bank account and is well able to pay lawyers' fees, which in these days are no small sum. The McGraw-Dreyfuss-Pulliam case gave rise to several unusual features. In the first place, it was almost unprecedented for the manager of a major league team to be publicly disciplined, fined and suspended. Then, again, the fact that the board of directors of the National league publicly censured the president and owner of a club was remarkable.

The language used by the board in exonerating McGraw and censuring Dreyfuss was as follows:

"First.—That the charges as made by President Dreyfuss are not warranted by the evidence submitted, and Manager John McGraw is hereby exonerated.

"Second.—The board, with much regret, expresses its disapproval of the undignified course of President Dreyfuss in indulging in an open controversy with a ball player on the grounds of a National league club. It sincerely hopes that no other club owner in a moment of excitement will so far forget the dignity that attaches to the presidency of a National league ball club."

To cap the climax of recent troubles McGraw after receiving notice of his suspension was handed a telegram from his sister, Mrs. Bowler of Fulton, N. Y., to the effect that his father, who is sixty-six years old, was dangerously ill and probably dying at the home of his daughter. McGraw at once started for his sister's home. Happily his father's illness did not result fatally.

GOMEZ' BODY IS LYING IN STATE

Cuban Congress Orders Mourning of Three Days.

Havana, June 19.—The body of General Maximo Gomez was taken to the palace Sunday, where it now lies in state in the principal saloon, surrounded by great masses of flowers sent by relatives, friends, comrades, the government departments and social and political organizations. The body is guarded by a detachment of rural guards, and several of the general's friends are acting as a guard of honor. Band concerts and performances in the theaters, which are customary on Sunday, as well as all social gayeties, were wholly suspended. Congress, at a special session early Sunday morning, decided that the period of mourning shall continue for three days, during which time public business will be suspended. Both houses appropriated $15,000 for the funeral.

OLIVER C. ISELIN BREAKS DOWN

Yachtsman in Nervous Collapse, is Under Care of Specialists.

New Rochelle, N. Y., June 19.—C. Oliver Iselin, the yachtsman, is ill at his home at All View, on Premium Point, New Rochelle, and is under the care of a specialist and nurse. He is said to be suffering from a nervous breakdown. Mr. Iselin has not been seen around New Rochelle since he returned from Aiken two months ago. According to some of his friends, the yachtsman has never quite gotten over the way the newspapers criticized him when he sailed the second race against Sir Thomas Lipton's boat, Shamrock II.

It was with a glow of genuine excitement that after an hour's interview with the broker in whose office this episode had occurred, Mr. Thomas hastened to the office of John Lamm.

He met the detective at the foot of the stairs, and they went up together. The outer office was occupied, and Lamm led the way to his den. Scarcely a word had been interchanged. Both men were eager to speak.

"I've got something that will surprise you," said Thomas, "so prepare to sponge out a few of the figures on your slate and begin on a new sheet."

"Yes," "You have had your say about Marion Stackhouse. Now, I simply want to show you that there are others who have shown themselves to be more vindictive enemies of her husband than she has. I bring you a new name."

"Not the Albert Runyon which appears in the anonymous letter to North which you published yesterday?"

"No, sir; something more tangible than that. Madame Raymond."

Thomas had expected Lamm to present a face of deep professional interest, but to his chagrin the detective actually laughed.

"You don't mean to say, my friend, that you have just heard of her? Why, I've been working on her for days!"

Thomas stared.

"By all means," said Lamm, regaining his seriousness. "It may be just what I need to round out the facts already in my possession."

The reporter began his story. He first told what his voluntary informant had told him, and then of his visit to the broker. It appeared that the latter had a distinct recollection of the episode in his office, though he professed to attach no importance to it, to see no connection between it and subsequent events. To be sure the woman had acted unaccountably strange, but weren't women always doing something that no man would ever think of? However, the broker was willing to give the reporter every possible aid. The woman's name was Mme. Marie Raymond, and she had been a customer in stocks for some two years. She was a New York woman, and had been remarkably lucky in all her experiments except the bubble Niagara Midland. To the fact of her losses the broker wholly attributed her conduct on the occasion in question, which had been about six weeks previous. She was not the person to bear any defeat with equanimity.

"It is plain where you got your information, Lamm. But go on. His secret is as safe with both of us as with one."

"Did I not know that, Mr. Kingman? This offensive and defensive alliance of ours would never have been formed. Well, the clerk waited some days in vain for the return of the madame. But he avows on his honor that he never met a man so systematically irritable, abstracted and nervous as was Richard Petridge during the interim. Finally, on the 14th of last month, Mme. Raymond visited the office a second time. On this occasion our friend Petridge received her eagerly, and bade his clerk inform all callers that he was out. They retired to the inner office. The clerk could not restrain his curiosity, and he attempted to satisfy it by applying both eye and ear to the keyhole. The door was opened upon him suddenly, and his attitude and confusion were considered by Richard Petridge good grounds for his peremptory discharge."

"His unfortunate effort had only put him into possession of the following statement from the lips of the woman; and you can easily imagine that it meant worse than nothing to him: "Mr. Petridge, you and I understand each other, then. You will go to New Orleans; thence to Montreal. I will then find out that every word I have told you is the truth. When you return, you will meet me in New York. I will come to Boston with you, and we will act together."

"When?" ejaculated Thomas, whose eyes gleamed with excitement. "This is most extraordinary."

"Then what will you say to the sequel, my boy? Within two days Richard Petridge had started upon that mysterious month's absence about which we were curious awhile ago. You can easily understand now why

"And now," said John Lamm, "when does he say he was last visited by this woman?"

"Not since that occasion. All her business had been done by mail, post-marked New York."

"Umh! And did he mention that he sent her to Richard Petridge?"

"No."

"Well, he did, Thomas, unwittingly; and as sure as you are sitting in that chair you have just related to me the initial scene of the tragedy in Paul North's house."

Thomas stared at his friend, the detective, to assure himself that he was in earnest and in his right mind. But there could be no doubt on either point.

"And then," said the reporter, eagerly, "you give up the idea that Marion Stackhouse originated the conspiracy?"

"Well," returned Lamm, "I give up very little. My opinions have been enlarged and modified to suit the new facts—not changed. However, it's not theories you want now, but facts. Let me give you an idea of what work I have been doing since our last conference."

The detective took out his notebook, opened it upon his knee, and referred to his hieroglyphics.

"Yes, Mr. Thomas, your broker quite unwittingly sent Mme. Raymond, alias Mme. Perle, and as a matter of fact, Marie Moissot, Creole, born in New Orleans, 27 years ago, to Richard Petridge. Her conference with the broker was May 10. Her appearance in Richard Petridge's office was May 11. Ergo, Mr. Broker-man must have casually mentioned it as reported in the street that North & Stackhouse are all right because backed by Richard Petridge."

Thomas marveled at the apparent accuracy of his friend's statements.

"In the name of wonder, where have you seen the past 48 hours?" he asked.

"My sources of information are confidential but reliable," said the detective. "The almighty dollar will sometimes open the mouth of the confidential servant that is, while the confidential servant that was, if he is approached properly, is ever ready to get his old master into a scrape. And, besides that, I have received the confessions of a gentleman who shall be nameless, whose means of judgment are unexceptional."

"I understand dimly, but enough. Never mind the how; let's have the what."

"At once, my boy. The 11th of last May, Mme. Raymond visited Richard Petridge for the first time. When she came in at the door he looked upon an entire stranger. She came openly to discover the exact standing of North & Stackhouse as a firm, and of North and Stackhouse as individuals. In the midst of their conference about Stackhouse, the woman began to talk in a loud voice, uttering such sentences as these: 'Thornton Stackhouse must go to the wall, my friend, wife or no wife! He hasn't escaped me, now that I know him! The man I have been turning heaven and earth to find! I shall denounce him, ruin him—make him feel the same degradation of social scorn that he has made others feel! Thereupon Mr. Petridge, observing that this extraordinary speech had attracted the attention of his clerk, who has forgotten himself so far as to stare at the woman with his mouth open, hustles his mysterious visitor with mysterious haste into his inner office, and not only closes the door, but locks it. The conference lasted fully two hours. Petridge came out once or twice to dismiss some visitor or other, and the change in his color and manner was so marked that the clerk was greatly impressed. So much so, in fact, that he began to wonder and to watch for madame's return."

"It is plain where you got your information, Lamm. But go on. His secret is as safe with both of us as with one."

"Did I not know that, Mr. Kingman? This offensive and defensive alliance of ours would never have been formed. Well, the clerk waited some days in vain for the return of the madame. FACES DEFICIT OF $28,000,000

Receipts of Federal Treasury
for Fiscal Year Less Than Outlay.

SUGGEST RAISE IN BEER TAX

Opponents to 3-Cent Tariff on Coffee
Urge Congress to Impose Extra Levy of $1 Per Barrel on Malt Beverages.

Washington, June 19.—With less than two weeks of the present fiscal year remaining there is a deficit of $26,629,025.75 in the treasury.

At present the receipts are coming in at a rate of about $250,000 a day in excess of the expenditures. This will bring the deficit down to about $23-000,000 for the year if the receipts continue to come in at the present rate.

By many officials and members of Congress the condition of the treasury is regarded as the most important matter before the administration, and it will undoubtedly be considered so at the next session of the national legislature.

The majority in Congress is opposed to any change in the customs laws that will in any way tend to a general readjustment of tariff schedules.

Plan to Increase Revenues.

The Senate committee was authorized shortly before the close of the last regular session to meet during the summer recess and consider some plan of increasing the revenue. Senator Aldrich, chairman of the committee, has been away in Europe for some time, but is expected back soon. It is hardly probable that he will call the committee together now until the latter part of September, or possibly not until October.

The income of customs is estimated
for the year at about $263,000,000,
being the largest amount ever collected except in 1903, when such receipts were unusually large, owing to the excessive imports caused by our inability to meet the demands of the home markets. The customs returns for that year were $234,479,582.

Lay Deficit to Canal.

In all of these years there was an excess except last year and this,
though the deficit of 1904 was due entirely to the payments for the Panama canal, which if not considered would leave an actual surplus of $9,000,000.
Among the plans for increasing the income of the government suggested which has met with the most favor in congressional circles is the restoration of the tax on beer. That the brewers are fully aware of this is shown by the campaign they have already started to avert just such legislation. A tax of $1 a barrel on beer would just about wipe out the deficiency of $30-000,000. At the recent meeting of the brewers at Atlantic City this threatened revenue measure was fully discussed and plans made to defeat it.

Coffee Tax Is Suggested.

It has been charged that the suggestion for the tax on coffee came from the brewers. As there are over 9,000,000 pounds imported into the United States annually a three cents duty would bring in not less than $25-000,000. A tax on coffee would not make a popular issue around campaign times, as it would arouse the cry of putting a tax on the poor man's coffee
pot. Still it is being urged that the consumer would have to bear a comparative small share of this tax and further that such a tax would tend to encourage the production of coffee in our possessions, the Philippines and Puerto Rico.

Those who are opposed to the suggestion of taxing coffee are using much the same argument in favor of putting back the tax on beer. The consumer would not feel it in any way, they say, and beer at 5 cents a glass would bear a tax of $1 a barrel without anyone suffering a hardship. The suggestion has also been made that the documentary tax or stamp tax be restored.

H. C. FRICK IS GENEROUS TO CIVIL WAR VETERANS

Agrees to Do His Share Toward Erecting $2,500,000 Memorial Under Auspices of Grand Army.

Pittsburg, Pa., June 13.—On the advice of H. C. Frick, the G. A. R. members of Allegheny county will have erected a memorial hall costing no less than $2,500,000 instead of $1-000,000, as had been the original intention, and it is further understood that Mr. Frick will give $1,000,000 of this himself.

During the last short visit of Mr.
Frick to Pittsburg a delegation of the G. A. R. here visited him to ask if he would do anything toward assisting in building the memorial hall which they had in view. Capt. Duval headed the committee and was explaining the object of the visit when Mr. Frick said: "How much do you figure on spending on such a hall?"

"About $1,000,000."
"It's not enough. That would look cheap and you fellows who saved the country deserve better at our hands.
We must make it no less than $2,500-
000. Take that idea back to your people and tell them I will do my share." It is understood that Mr. Frick later explained the word "share" by saying it meant $1,000,000.

First Mention of Interest.

The word "interest" was first used in an act of parliament in 1523 for a lawful increase in compensation for the use of money lent.

THE CONTROL OF MOROCCO

A Subject Which Is Straining Diplomatic Relations Among European Powers.

For a long time past the ambitions of the French, British and Spanish have clashed in Morocco. France desires to control northwestern Africa,
but Spain has interests in Morocco,
and the British have long objected to the extension of the boundaries of French Algeria to the west. About a year ago, says Youth's Companion, an agreement was made between Great Britain and France, under which the British virtually consented to a French protectorate over Morocco, but on what terms has not yet been disclosed.

In these negotiations the sultan of Morocco was not consulted. Indeed, the announcement that the agreements had been made surprised the cabinets of Europe.

Last March France, in pursuance of the treaty, asked the sultan to agree to a plan under which he should deal with foreign powers through French agents. Before he had replied to the demand the German emperor visited Tangier and made a speech. In the course of which he said that he would always deal directly with the sultan,
and would not allow any other power
to act as an intermediary, as he recognized the sultan as an independent sovereign. He wished to protect the commercial rights of Germany. The emperor instructed his minister to negotiate a treaty which should secure to Germany all the privileges enjoy by the most favored nations.

It is useless to predict the outcome of this refusal of Germany to recognize the right of the French to assume a protectorate over Morocco, but it is likely that the disagreement will be settled through ordinary diplomatic channels rather than by an appeal to force.

ENGLAND'S POOR-TAX BILL.

System of Providing for the Indigent
of All Classes Is Expensive.

The operations of England's poor-tax bill, designed for the relief of the poor of all classes in England and Wales, as reported to the state department by United States Consul Swalm at Southampton, show that during the last half of 1904 there was expended "in maintenance" $7,972,790;
for "out relief," $7,699,740; making a total of $15,672,530, an increase of $440,000, as compared with similar expenditures for the corresponding period of 1903. In addition to the sum named the cost for care of insane poor, in asylums, was $5,784,510, for the same half year; or a general total of $21,457,040 for the half year. For the year the charge easily reaches $43,000,000.

On July 1, 1904, the number of persons in England and Wales in receipt of poor relief (excluding pauper lunatics)
was 754,046, an increase of 24-804 over the number on the corresponding day in 1903.

"This plan," says Consul Swalm,
"of maintaining the children of the poor—or such as may be in the poor-houses or unions—in cottages and homes of that character, is happily finding a very general adoption, no less than 128 unions now maintaining the children away from the pau-perizing effects of poorhouse associations. The county of London paid out 72 cents per head of its population for the half year on poor account."

World's Greatest Coffee Drinkers.

According to customs returns, says
the Paris Petit Journal, the inhabitants of the island of Gex, off the coast of Brittany, are the greatest coffee drinkers in the world, consuming thirty pounds per head annually.

Wide Difference of Opinion
Prevails Among Officials

Declared That the Present Law
Was Unjust.

Washington, June 19.—There is considerable difference of opinion among officials of the administration over the question of modifying the Chinese exclusion law. Secretary of War Taft holds liberal views on this subject and the fact that he gave forcible expression to them in a recent speech in Ohio causes many to believe that he voiced President Roosevelt's opinion. Taft, it is said, is too good a friend of the president to embarrass him by tactless talk on any subject.
In his speech Secretary Taft declared that the present law was unjust and that it would be foolish to continue it in force and thereby cause a boycott of American products in China to the great detriment of the whole of the United States.

Differs With Labor Leaders.

The sentiment of western labor leaders concerning Chinese exclusion is well known to everybody in Washington, and the fact that while in that section Judge Taft took occasion to say hard things of their pet measure is regarded as an indication that the president has made up his mind to defy the labor vote of the Pacific coast and the west generally in an effort to bring about a more equitable method of dealing with Chinese entering this country, which would inevitably result in good to American industries.

Secretary Taft's opinion, which was shown to be the president's also,
through a recent order issued to immigration officials directing that the exclusion law be liberally construed, clashes with the pronounced anti-Chinese views of Secretary Metcalf of the department of commerce and labor. As a member of congress Mr.
Metcalf was instrumental in enacting the present stringent Chinese exclusion law, and he is known to share the sentiment of the Pacific coast against the presence of Chinamen in this country.

Metcalf Enforces Law.

It is Secretary Metcalf who directs
the enforcement of the existing law,
and he unhesitatingly proclaims that it is not rigidly enforced as far as students and merchants are concerned. He says the trouble is that the Chinese resort to duplicity and deception in claiming to belong to the class allowed to enter and that care is necessary.

The construction of the law is in the hands of the head of the department of commerce and labor, and it is claimed by southern cotton mill men and others who are seeking to have the enforcement of the law ameliorated that Secretary Metcalf could do much to soften the wrath of the Chinese if he felt so disposed.

Secretary Metcalf has taken the position that no relief to the Chinaman can be expected except through an act of congress. He has virtually dismissed the appeal of the manufacturers with that statement.

Secretary Taft has indicated that both congress and the executive branch of the government can do much to make the Chinese think more kindly of this country.
